CONFERENCE

12 JUNE 2017

REPORTING

Corporate Responsibility and Sustainability

ABOUT

In 2011, the European Commission defined CSR as the “responsibility of enterprises for their impact on society”. Abiding by the laws, integrating social, environmental, ethical, consumer and human rights concerns into their business strategy and operations, helps companies become socially responsible, as per EC Communication COM (2011)681. Moving forward in 2014, with the introduction of Directive 2014/95/EU, large undertakings and groups in Europe are requested to disclose non-financial information from 2017 onwards. In the meantime, more and more businesses are committed to CSR worldwide, by establishing CSR strategies and practices that help them be better prepared to face risks, thus contributing to the enhancement of their reputation, their attractiveness to investors and consequently, their competitiveness. CSR is becoming a standard business practice for successful companies all around the world. What makes CSR that important? What is CSR about and what is not? What are the new obligations as per EU Directive? How can all companies, irrespective of their legal obligations, apply and benefit from CSR? How can the business world contribute to Global Sustainability?

Join us on June 12th to find answers to the above and much more on CSR

ATTENDANCE

The conference is addressed to:

Businesses from all sectors (including large undertakings, groups of companies, small and medium enterprises, micro and start-ups), public entities, trade unions, associations, academia, competent public authorities and parliamentary committees, other CSR competent bodies.
